

Your Encouragement

- God used our past to shape our future. He never wastes a tear, a broken heart, or broken body. He takes those circumstances and redeems them by encouraging us to use them to bless others.
- Telling our story has Power. We all have "disabilities" of one sort or another. It's just that some are more noticeable.
- We waited over three decades for our passion and dream to come true. It's always on God's timetable.
- If God wants it to happen (whatever He's planted in your heart) it will surely happen if you stay open to it.

Your Empowerment

Your WHO and WHY are critical to following your heart's passion to your purpose. My WHO was my dad - a WWII veteran with 20 years of service and a post-service lifetime of struggling with PTSD and survivor's guilt. My WHY was the fallout from me startling him one late night and how that changed things. My WHY was because I didn't want other little kids seeing their daddy struggle the way ours did. It broke my heart!

Look back on your past...was there an incident, or maybe even a theme or pattern of events that might reveal a passion that's just waiting for you to uncover? It could be something hurtful, or a love of yours. But to ask WHO and WHY are the keys that lead you to HOW, WHERE, and WHEN. (a Masterclass breakout for sure!)

If something popped up... sit with it, journal about it and see what God says about it...and stay open to it. Even if it takes decades to be lived out!

Good work Ladies!!!
